Re: mobile applications developer

Dear Hiring Manager,

I came across the Mobile Application Developer job opportunity on your company website and I strongly believe that I'll be a great fit for the position. My skills and knowledge would greatly complement what Bally's Interactive is searching for as an organization as well as fulfill the requirements needed to take the developer role into greater heights.

Throughout my tenure at George Brown College, I've worked on various projects that required thoughtful thinking and modifications for specific mobile applications and databases for the system to run efficiently. In addition to this, I've also designed and tested software code providing high-quality solutions using various IDEs as well as languages such as Java and C# to name a few. My experience extends to troubleshooting and diving into certain sections of the program using analytic tools provided by the system as well as prior research for the operation to function as desired. This as well as my academic background equips me with a solid understanding for mobile applications, eager to learn more along the way. My passion and excitement would bring success to the company and success to future projects.

Thank you for taking the time to review my resume. I truly believe that my experience and academic background would make me a valuable asset for the company. I'm excited about the opportunity to learn more about mobile applications and how I can be an addition to the company. I look forward to an interview at your convenience and can be best reached at 416-308-6851 or with my email: Jason.opoku@georgebrown.ca.

Sincerely,

Jason Opoku
